The following article is an excerpt from the book 'Across America by Motorcycle: On a Harley Davidson in 1919' by Erwin G. Baker. It is the story of his epic journey across the United States on his Harley Davidson motorcycle.

In the summer of 1919, Erwin G. Baker set out on an epic journey across the United States on his Harley Davidson motorcycle. He was 21 years old and had just graduated from college. He had always dreamed of traveling the country by motorcycle, and now he finally had the opportunity to do it.

Baker's journey took him from New York City to San Francisco, and back again. He traveled through 48 states and covered over 10,000 miles. Along the way, he met a variety of people and had a variety of adventures.

Baker's book is a fascinating account of his journey. He writes about the challenges of traveling on a motorcycle in the early 1900s, the beauty of the American landscape, and the people he met along the way.

Baker's journey is an inspiring story of adventure and self-discovery. It is a reminder that anything is possible if you set your mind to it.

Excerpt from the book:

I started out from New York City on a bright sunny morning in July. I was riding a 1919 Harley Davidson motorcycle, and I was excited to begin my journey across the United States.

I had been planning this trip for months, and I had everything I needed packed on my motorcycle. I had a tent, a sleeping bag, a few changes of clothes, and some food. I also had a map of the United States, and I had marked out the route I wanted to take.

I rode west out of New York City, and I quickly left the hustle and bustle of the city behind me. I enjoyed riding through the countryside, and I stopped to admire the scenery whenever I could.

I traveled through Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa. The roads were mostly good, but there were some rough spots. I also had to deal with some rain and wind.

But I didn't let the challenges stop me. I kept riding, and I eventually reached my destination: San Francisco.

I had traveled over 10,000 miles, and I had seen a lot of the country. I had met a lot of people, and I had had a lot of adventures. It was an amazing journey, and I'm glad I did it.
