Guidelines for Writing Letters of Recommendation

When writing a letter of recommendation for anesthesiology residency, it is important to follow the guidelines set forth by the program. These guidelines may vary from program to program, so it is important to check the specific requirements for each program that you are applying to.

In general, letters of recommendation should be:

- * Typed and single-spaced
- * No more than two pages in length
- * Written on official letterhead
- * Signed by the author
- * Dated

The letter should include the following information:

- * The author's name, title, and affiliation
- * The date of the letter
- * The name of the applicant
- * The program that the applicant is applying to
- * A brief description of the applicant's qualifications
- * An assessment of the applicant's strengths and weaknesses
- * A recommendation for the applicant

Tips for Getting Strong Letters of Recommendation

Here are some tips for getting strong letters of recommendation:

- * Choose your recommenders carefully. The people who write your letters of recommendation should be able to speak to your qualifications and character. They should be people who know you well and who can provide a positive assessment of your abilities.
- * Ask your recommenders early. Don't wait until the last minute to ask for letters of recommendation. Give your recommenders plenty of time to write thoughtful and well-written letters.
- * Provide your recommenders with information. Give your recommenders a copy of your CV, personal statement, and any other materials that they may need to write a strong letter of recommendation. *

Be professional. When you ask for letters of recommendation, be professional and polite. Thank your recommenders for their time and consideration. * Follow up. After you have submitted your letters of recommendation, follow up with your recommenders to thank them for their support.
