These surgeons have all performed thousands of successful hair transplants, and they are known for their expertise and dedication to their patients.

Hair Transplant Procedure in Turkey

The hair transplant procedure in Turkey is typically performed under local anesthesia. The surgeon will first remove the donor hair from the back or sides of your head. The donor hair is then transplanted to the recipient area on your scalp. The procedure usually takes several hours, and you can expect to spend one or two nights in the clinic after the surgery.

Most hair transplant patients experience some swelling and redness in the recipient area after surgery. However, these side effects usually subside within a few days. You can expect to see new hair growth within a few months, and the final results of your transplant will be visible within a year.

Is a Hair Transplant in Turkey Right for Me?

A hair transplant in Turkey may be right for you if you are experiencing hair loss and you are looking for a permanent solution. Hair transplants can be used to restore hair to the scalp, eyebrows, or beard. They are also an effective treatment for scars and burns.

If you are considering a hair transplant in Turkey, it is important to do your research and choose a reputable clinic and surgeon. You should also be aware of the risks and complications associated with hair transplants.
